In addition to the one-time up-front franchise fee, you'll be required to make periodic franchise royalty fee payments to the franchisor over the life of the franchise agreement. If your franchise fee is the cost of joining the franchisor's business family, royalty fees are the cost of staying in the family. There is no getting away from paying franchise royalties when buying a franchise.. The very reason for an entrepreneur to buy into a franchise is to get a kick-start and ongoing support for his business, which obviously comes at a price in the form of royalties.
