Ghrelin (pronounced / ? r ? l ? n /), the "hunger hormone", also known as lemorelin (), is a peptide hormone produced by ghrelinergic cells in the gastrointestinal tract that functions as a neuropeptide in the central nervous system. Besides regulating appetite, ghrelin also plays a significant role in regulating energy homeostasis.. When the stomach is empty, ghrelin is secreted. Defense Mechanisms. We go through many, many changes as we move from infancy through childhood to adulthood. The one that came to mind for me the other day as I was holding a friend's new born baby in my arms and thinking about the psychological distance between his infant mind and my own, was a consciousness of all the personality defenses and coping strategies we learn while growing up; how ... Doctor's Note. In case you missed my previous video, check out Is Orthorexia a Real Eating Disorder?. Stay tuned for The Orthorexia Nervosa Test. You simply won't believe how they "diagnose" this thing. While, as I think you'll clearly see after watching the entire three-part series, orthorexia cannot be considered a legitimate eating disorder, there are very real and very serious eating ...
